Angélique Kidjo's new album "Eve" debuted at No. 1 on Billboard's World Music Charts when it came out in January, now she has a video ready to accompany it. Kidjo today premieres "Eva" on Speakeasy.

The Benin native produced the video in conjunction with Rotary International as part of the organization's fight against polio in the developing world.

The clip alternates between shots of French-Nigerian musician Aşa, who sings on the track, Kidjo and a little girl in a junk shop, as facts about polio pop up on the screen. The "End Polio Now" campaign is a cause that's close to Kidjo's heart, she said.

"I am alive because I was vaccinated as a child in Benin," she said. "I had school friends whose parents didn't believe in vaccination or understand that it was provided for free, and some of them ended up with polio! There is no excuse for any child to suffer from polio or any other preventable disease."

Check out her song on the link below...

LOOKING BRIGHTER

A SMALL club with a big heart — that's Kippa-Ring Rotary!

When the 17-man club saw the devastation of Brighton after December's hailstorm, members wanted to help.

Treasurer Russyl Wilton moved that a donation be sent.

However, after sitting in on a Brighton Community Committee meeting, it was decided to help one of the many families in financial difficulties with repairs.

Happy ending to the story was the delivery last week of some $200 worth of paint to refurbish the interior and exterior of the Regency Street home of Alf and Eleanor Ollett. They were pictured with Russyl Wilton (right) who expressed appreciation to Paint 'n' Paper, Redcliffe for their generosity in the transaction.
