Interplast is a non-government organisation that was established by Rotarians in 1983, in conjunction with the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons. It is actively supported by Rotarians in clubs and districts throughout Australia and New Zealand. Rotarians have always played an integral role and continue to do so today in lots of different ways. Interplast changes lives by providing access to free surgery and free training to in-country medical staff. Interplast sends volunteer surgeons, anaesthetists, nurses and allied health professionals to developing countries in the Asia Pacific region to deliver programs of treatment and training.
